To whom it may concern,

It has come to my attention that the state of South Carolina is trying to ban Uber from operating in this great state. I would like to point out why this would not be a good idea. I, for one, rely on Uber after a long night of drinking and being out on the town. Everyone knows that being the designated driver is a drag, so having an Uber driver to rely is really beneficial. Not to mention that parking in downtown Greenville and Charleston is not one of life's greatest pleasures. I hope that y'all will change your opinion.

Thank you,
Sally Good

Subject: Seriously? This is how we treat Uber?

As a state, South Carolina has never been considered a tech haven. We're never one of the first states to benefit from technological innovation, an economically stifling fact, but we still have the chance to move past this and attract more attention in that realm in the coming future. Most people here in the state understand this need and desire for us to grow in that respect, yet when we get the opportunity to have one of the companies at the forefront of this industry begin operations here, we as a state show them our thanks by issuing them a cease and desist order? Not only this, but we allow them to operate here for a full half year before we finally get around to doing so?

This just looks bad on our part. Not only do citizens like you and me lose the opportunity to have transportation available at the tip of our fingers, but you've also just terminated the part time jobs of all of the Uber drivers here in the state. That was money these drivers were depending on to help support their families, and now the rug has been pulled out from under them as they have to scramble to find some other way to earn some supplemental income. I've talked to a number of these drivers on various trips - aspiring entrepreneurs trying to raise a little extra money to start a business, fathers who are still underemployed from the recession trying to make ends meet.

This isn't punishing Uber for whatever faults they may have. This is punishing their drivers, members of our community. This is punishing the other citizens of the state who have come to really appreciate the services that Uber provides us.

It's the little choices like this that prevent our state from becoming a leader in any sort of industry.

I hope you'll reconsider your decision to stifle the economic efficiency Uber was seeking to provide. The people who you're hurting most are those you're trying to protect.

Sincerely,
Josh

Please let Uber stay in South Carolina!!!! It is much easier and quicker than taxi cabs in Charleston and thus leads to less drunk drivers in our city!!!!

This is an issue of major importance to me and I would be paying attention to how my representatives will be voting.

Thank you! Kathleen Hodgson

It's a great option and ridiculous that your trying to regulate a corporate operation when it's clearly not necessary.
